Learning goals

- Explain that AI can make pictures, voices and messages that look real.
- Use stop, think, ask.
- Choose a family code word.

Activity: Activity: Stop, think, ask

1. Warm-up (3 min): Read three made-up headlines, such as “Shark found swimming in a school playground”. For each, ask: real or fake? How could you check?
2. Act (8 min): In pairs, one plays a caller with a scary story who asks for money or a code. The other uses stop, think, ask, and asks for the code word. Then swap.
3. Sort (5 min): Sort six made-up message cards into “real” and “scam”. Circle the warning signs: rushing, a prize from nowhere, a request for a code.
4. Poster (4 min): Draw the three steps, Stop, Think and Ask, with a picture for each, for your class wall.

Use made-up names and stories only. Nobody shares real codes or passwords, even in the game.

Discussion

- Why are looks and spelling no longer enough to spot a fake?
- How does a family code word beat a fake voice?
- Why can a fake picture of a real person hurt them?

Check yourself

- Write the three steps of the habit, and when you would use them.

Try it this week
At home, choose a secret family code word together, and practise once: if someone calls with a scary story and asks for money, ask for the code word. Never write the word on a phone.
