Data about you

Data engineering · Level 1 · Lesson 4

Time
15 min

Materials
Paper and coloured pencils; A phone or tablet with Darsi, for the lab

Learning goals

- Name data about you.
- Decide what's fine to share, what needs care and what stays private.
- Ask a trusted adult before giving your details.

Activity: Fine, care or private

1. List (3 min): Read out facts about a made-up child: her favourite colour, her street, her pet's name, her school.
2. Sort (5 min): Pupils say which box each fact goes in: fine, care or private.
3. Add up (4 min): Put three "fine" facts together. Could a stranger now find the child?
4. Practise (3 min): Act out a game asking for your address: the answer is to stop and ask a trusted adult.

Use a made-up child only. Never ask pupils to share their own address or phone number in class.

Discussion

- Which facts about you are private?
- How can small facts add up?
- Who is a trusted adult you could ask?

Check yourself

- Name one fact that's fine to share, one that needs care and one that stays private.

Try it this week
With your family, draw three boxes on paper: fine, care and private. Write ten facts about you, and sort them into the boxes.

Data about you

Data engineering · Level 1 · Lesson 4

1 Stop, and ask a trusted adult first

Stop and ask a trusted adult first. A prize that wants your address is often a trick, and a friend's address is private too.

2 Your name; Your photo; Your marks

Your name, your photo and your marks all say something about you.

3 Your favourite fruit — Fine to share
Your photo — Share with care
Your home address — Keep private

Your favourite fruit can't help anyone find you.

4 False

You can always say no, and ask a trusted adult first.
